

Forensic Risk Integrated Formulation: Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Cultural Consideration Prompts

Notes on using this resource:

- This was designed to support clinicians to include culturally relevant information when formulating the forensic risk of an Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander young person, while it may also assist general mental health formulation - it was not designed specifically for this purpose and does not replace social and emotional wellbeing frameworks.
- This resource is designed to compliment broader strategies to embed culturally safe practice within Forensic CYMHS. Clinicians should seek ongoing training and cultural consultation to ensure that they elicit information in a culturally safe manner and have an in-depth understanding of how these prompts may be relevant for each individual young person.

Developed by Mandy Douch for the Forensic Child and Youth Mental Health Service, with input from members of the Forensic CYMHS Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander advisory group.
